

THE SENATE
OF THE PARLIAMENT OF THE CZECH REPUBLIC
9TH TERM

409TH

RESOLUTION OF THE SENATE

Delivered on the 18th session held on 29th January 2014

on the Single European Telecommunications Market (Senate Press no. N 093/09 and J 094/09)

The Senate

I.

1. Supports

repeatedly and consistently, the development of the EU internal market through increasing competition, removing administrative barriers to market entry and strengthening the protection of consumers and end-users;

2. Is convinced that the completion of the single telecommunications market will bring more innovation and investment in next-generation networks in Europe and subsequently enable the creation of a fully functioning digital single market in the EU, which is a long-standing priority of the Czech Republic;

II.

1. Supports

in general the objectives of the proposal, especially in areas related to network neutrality, coordinated spectrum management, virtual access products and international roaming;

2. Raises

objections to the introduction of a single European authorization and the proposed provisions on consumer protection, because those will not, in the Senate's view, lead to the intended objectives;

3. Is convinced that the final negotiated regulation must not undermine one of the basic principles of legislation, i.e. a stable and predictable regulatory framework favourable for investment;

4. Notes

that so far there has not been any need for ex post regulation of operators' transgressions against the Consumer Rights Directive, because the operators generally comply with the Directive provisions, and therefore it is not appropriate to introduce ex ante regulatory obligations;

5. Points out

several inconsistencies and inaccuracies of the explanatory memorandum, such as the alleged falling behind in terms of development of the telecommunications market in the EU compared to the U.S. or China, supposedly caused by the existence of 28 different regulatory environments, while such a comparison fails to take into account the actual state of the EU market, where average download speed is significantly higher than in the U.S., and even in other categories the EU market is fully comparable with those of other developed countries;

6. Considers it problematic that the legislative proposal did not undergo a comprehensive public consultation and therefore the Commission missed an opportunity to take into account comments of consumers, businesses and national authorities; moreover, the proposal was not supported by a comprehensive analysis of the effectiveness of the existing regulatory framework;

7. Recalls

that the quality of the final regulation is influenced by the expected time-frame for the examination and negotiation of the proposal; should the Regulation apply as early as 1 July 2014, as envisaged by the Commission, the Council and the European Parliament would have to negotiate and adopt the regulation within only a few months;

8. Rejects

any possible pressure on the speed of negotiation at the expense of the final text quality in a proposal that aims to bring fundamental changes to the regulatory framework, reminding that the process of adoption of the existing 2009 regulatory framework was challenging and lasted approximately two years; in addition, that process took form of Directives amendment, which does not compare to the scope and impact of the current proposal for a Regulation;

9. Fears

that the that the announced date of entry into force of the draft on 1 July 2014 is not realistic, especially with regard to the elections to the European Parliament in May 2014;

III.

1. Requests

the Government to inform the Senate about the way this position was taken into account and to provide the Senate with further information on the proceeding of negotiations;

2. Authorises

the President of the Senate to forward this Resolution to the European Commission.
